SUMARA SIDING™

Sumara Siding™ is our luxurious brand of siding which gives clients a choice between three of the most sought-after tropical hardwoods in the world: Ipe, Greenheart, and Purpleheart. These three wood species are known for their incredible strength, resistance to termites, and other wood eating pests, and a life span of 50 years plus.

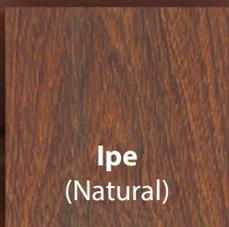

From the Rocky Mountains of Colorado to the shores of the British Virgin Islands to halfway around the world in Dubai, more and more residential and commercial luxury properties are utilizing tropical hardwood. One reason is certainly its amazing beauty, but resilience to harsh weather conditions (such as coastal humidity, hurricanes, ice, snow and hot temperatures) is a major plus. In a market flooded with composite siding and with a host of wood species to select from, how does a consumer make the best choice? The job of selecting the right product can be an arduous task that needs professional guidance; from someone with your best interest in mind. At Woods Direct, our goal is to simplify the choice, making it as easy as possible for our customers to understand the product their buying and ensure they'll be happy with the results.

Sumara Siding™ is made from luxury hardwood harvested from the rainforest of Guyana, South America. The beautiful wood used in the manufacturing of Sumara Siding™ are protected by government agencies focused on securing future forest resources for generations to come. We are part of that mission and believe in targeted harvesting practices that keep a canopy of trees growing for the future.

At our manufacturing plant, meticulous cuts are made with great precision to ensure that all siding boards are straight; and consistent in thickness and width. Untreated, the wood has a "Class A" fire rating, making it naturally almost as fire resistant as concrete or metal. We stand by our Sumara Siding™ with a 50-year product guarantee for as long as the original owner possesses the property. If you'd like to compliment your siding with decking, check out our decking product lines as you consider making Woods Direct your DIRECT source for tropical hardwood.
